

Overview

Los Angeles County Public Works is developing a Transportation Demand Management (TDM) Ordinance to ensure that new development projects incorporate strategies or features that would expand mobility options and reduce reliance on driving alone across the County.

Better Planning Through TDM

The TDM Ordinance would encourage and require applicable new development projects to invest in programs, services, and on-site transportation amenities that provide more sustainable and affordable options for getting around. By shifting focus from moving cars to moving people, TDM strategies aim to reduce traffic, improve access, and create safer, healthier, and more connected communities.

Get Involved

The County is in the early stages of developing its TDM Ordinance. We are seeking input from community members, businesses, local agencies, and other stakeholders to help shape the program's goals and strategies. Your feedback will ensure the programs reflect how you travel and supports a more sustainable, connected County.
