Q Well, to what document are these field notes attached?
A Let's see. I don't remember exactly the designation.

Q In what document is that line described?
A It is in the field notes of the survey of the Los Corrison Ranch. They are on record in the County Recorder's office, I believe, and also in the office of the Clerk of the Court.

Q That is the meander line originally run for the location of the Los Corrison Ranch, the original survey line, a point "L.C. 271" and ask you what that line is.

A That is the meander line originally run for the location of the Los Corrison Ranch, the original survey line, designations running through to the easterly side of the map to "L.C. 268", and then by various courses and marked by different points, "L.C. 261" and then again going eastward to a point marked at another point, then, doubling back by various courses, to a side of the map and marked "L.C. 264", at one point, "L.C. 265" at another point, and continuing easterly marked, "L.C. 266",

Q Now, I show you another line, beginning near the west side of the map and marked "L.C. 264", at one point, "L.C. 265" at another point, and continuing easterly marked, "L.C. 266",

Q And by you?
A Yes sir.

Q And was that line run by an actual survey on the ground?
A Yes sir.

Q Now, you speak of high tide. What do you mean by high water mark of the Pacific Ocean as it existed in November of 1905?

A Why, high tide of the Pacific Ocean.

Q Does that line, then, define the line of ordinary high water mark of the Pacific Ocean as it existed in November of 1905?
A Yes sir.

Q Now, going back to this line of evidence, did you
